PERSONALITY COMMENTS

Temperament and Humor

[vignette second son]

"Walter, I see why your kids turned out so well: they are such a contrast from you!"

-Walter Sullivan, husband of Vera Clark (Sullivan), who was Wilford's daughter, 1964.

"Only once did I hear W. W. Clark speak sharply. One spring, he had been away when it came time to use the water for his meadow; the meadow was not watered. He sought another chance to water, based on an issue he believed was just and fair. The water commissioner told him, 'You should have stayed home and attended to business.' Uncle replied, 'I will have you understand it is my business when and where I go!'"

-Walter E. Clark, son of Wilford's older brother Edward B. Clark, 1961.

"Coming home late from Mutual one evening while Grandpa was in charge of us three, he asked me, 'Granddaughter, what time does MIA let out?' And then he told me how his own daughter (my mother, LeOra) came in late one evening, and when he asked her, 'Daughter, what does the clock say?' she answered, 'Tick, tock; tick, tock'."

—Carolee Larsen Harmon, granddaughter of Wilford, 1960.
