became school teachers. It seemed to follow in the family. All her sons married school teachers. Walter, principal of the High School in Georgetown, is now retired. Bryant is principal of Juarez Academy in Mexico, and has charge of all the church schools in Mexico. Rhoda taught Home Economics, and was called on a mission to Oregon. Returning from her mission in late fall, she failed to get a school as teachers had been chosen. Her next best moved was to take a nurses course in the L.D.S. Hospital. After graduation, she was retained in the hospital as a teacher of nurses, and had charge of one of the floors. Her daughter Maurine, a graduate, taught in Sevier County, then at Riverton, West Jordan Stake, where she married a fine young man, a returned Elder, Ruben Wiberg, who also filled a second mission as president of the Tongan Islands. While there, Alice lived with Muarine. Then later the family moved to Roy, Weber County. The school board, learning that she had been a school teacher, drafted her to teach. Her family being pretty well grown, she is still teaching. She was sustained and set apart as president of the Primary in Lake View Stake.

Alice was living with Rhoda near the L.D.S. hospital. She went to Sunday School and took a visiting lady home with her to dinner. While she was going with this sister to a Genealogical meeting, she had a heart attack and dropped dead on the sidewalk. I was attending a meeting in Bountiful, where it was announced that the wife of E.B. Clark had suddenly died. That was October 16, 1938.

Alice as true to her martial [marital] vows, a devoted wife, a loving mother and a consistant [consistent?] Latter Day Saint. Although she was active in church affairs while living in Georgetown she never liked the place and was glad to move away and devote her time to her family. However, she raised a fine family, one any person might be proud of. Farm life is hard, but after all on a farm is a good place to raise a family. Her children are not afraid to work and all of them, with their companions are devoted to the church
