Biography of Hyrum Don Carlos Clark by Owen Morrell Clark

FATHER . . . AS KNOWN BY EDNA CLARK ERICKSEN

rest."

(written up from notes taken by Morrell at interviews with her)

"Father made hand sleds for us, and would pull them" with a rope, from a horse, two or three in tandem."

Notes from November 19, 1981

"Father had quite a lot of sports in his nature."

Edna recounted a boat ride with Father on Bear Lake. "He was master of those oars" she later remarked.

"He loved to race" with horses.

On the ranch she and Heber helped milk the cows. At times she helped with fences. "Father was finicky about meat."

"He was a very steady driver."

Edna said that the FATHER I (Morrell) knew, was overburdened; he had "pressure;" and was "not the calm and deliberate FATHER that I (Edna) knew."

While Father was courting Mother (Eliza Porter) one time they were near the Weber River, and near the mouth of Weber Canyon, and Father asked: "If I'd catch the fish, would you fry it?" She replied: "Yes, you catch the fish and I'll fry 'em."

"Father used to take me for a ride on his horse, and while riding would like to hear me sing to him," -- such for example: "Up, up in the sky, Where the little birds fly,

"Down, down in the nest, where the little birds
