Story written by Antone Clark

May of 2001

i. Ezra James, b. 30 Mar. 1846, Montrose, Lee, Iowa;

d. unm. at Fonda, Montgomery, N.Y., 14 July 1868. At age 19 he left for a mission in England where he served for 3 years in the Worcestershire, Dorsetshire, and Kent Conferences. He was in poor health on the voyage home; he landed in New York 12 July 1868 and exerted himself beyond his strength in helping the immigrants to disembark. The heat was intense as he commenced his journey westward, and he died of sunstroke on the train. He was buried in Albany, N.Y., but the next spring his father went east to arrange transfer of his body to Utah for burial.
